

RUNWAY-INSPIRED ROOMS

Interior designs that take their cue from the latest eye-popping garments? Très chic! These stunning rooms pay homage to recent works from your favorite ateliers' new collections. Can you see how these catwalk creations have served as a springboard for some seriously stylish spaces?

{ PERSONAL SPACE }

"This regal color is commanding but also possesses a quiet allure that's both familiar and mysterious."

—Tess Giuliani, Tess Giuliani Designs, Ridgewood

All eyes were on this liquid satin jumpsuit at the debut of Sies Marjan's Spring 2020 Ready-to-Wear Collection in downtown Manhattan this past September. The model's slinky jumper lends its color to this living room's rich sapphire walls, intricately patterned furnishings and hand-painted ceramic vases. Iterations of the hue grace nearly every inch of this space for a design that's true-blue balanced.

{ PERSONAL SPACE }

“Black and white inspires modern monochromatic spaces
and always looks chic.”

—Rita Lyons, Rita Lyons Designs, Ramsey

Moto meets maiden in this chic lace-leather dress, in which a model struts down the runway at the Alexander McQueen Spring/Summer 2020 Ready-to-Wear fashion show in Paris. Similarly, this black-and-white boudoir juxtaposes feminine floral curtains and a crystal chandelier with an otherwise strong simplicity to make for the ultimate lovers' suite.

“Whether on the runway
or as a decorative color, bright chartreuse creates a ‘Wow!’ factor.”

—Patty Lacourte, Eurica Home, Waldwick

It's surely no coincidence that this totally retro long-sleeve slit dress made its way into Gucci's Spring/Summer 2020 show in Milan just before Etsy declared chartreuse its 2020 Color of the Year. The trendy, not-quite-green shade adds unexpected boldness to a minimalist kitchen. With a backsplash this loud, you don't even need décor!